Challenge

The engagement from Booz Allen Hamilton (BAH) was to envision and build a SharePoint Intranet to replace their existing platform, which did not promote a rich and complete user experience. The issues spanned a target audience of over 23,000 employees across 12 countries. The nine user types that segmented the workers changed continuously within a fluid organizational structure.

My team's distinctive challenges were: -

- Accessibility
- Usability
- Search
- Personalized User Profiles
- Content Delivery
- Employee Social Networking
- Content Governance
- Systems Integration

Idea

The suggestion was to release a minimum viable product for the initial launch date. The approach would support a successful deployment and allow for first-hand user feedback.

Over a six-month period, the team would focus on architecting a 'responsive/adaptive' design that allowed for scalability within the Microsoft Azure and SharePoint platforms. The outcome would be a clean, modern interface optimized for touch and worked smoothly across mobile devices.

Following a six (6) step process - "engagement, analyzing, design, building, deployment & governance", we conducted several workshops with Booz Allen Hamilton, connecting with Intranet Stakeholders and project sponsors to understand their needs, as well as formulate ideas around crafting a user-centric SharePoint Intranet solution.

Solution

The Booz Allen Hamilton team defined some success criteria in response to our interviews and game storming exercises. These measures focused the design efforts, guided our decisions and ensured that both teams kept working towards the same goals. The redesigned Intranet provided a uniform experience across mobile, tablet, and desktop devices. Different levels of user permissions/security were a major concern since a considerable portion of the content was of a sensitivity/classified nature.

The delivery model for the project consisted of six distinct phases. Individually each phase focused on separate goals and deliverables.

- Internal planning to ensure we could deliver within the ‘time/budget/resource’ constraints
- Client engagement to better understand the business requirements and needs of the user.
- Analyze the problems using a wide number of techniques via workshops.
- Personalized User Profiles
- Interface design using wireframes, a clickable prototype, and visual comps.
- Development of the solution.
- Deploying and testing the code within the client’s environment.

Result

With herculean efforts from a knowledgeable, dedicated team within a tight iterative environment, we were capable of meeting deadlines and having a successful product launch. The responsive/adaptive design solution surpasses the client’s expectations when demonstrated within the clickable prototype. The immense technical efforts were no match for the competent development team who delivered a solid product with minor hiccups.

Our History - Founder 1914

100 Years of Character

Genuine core values are timeless. For 100 years, Booz Allen Hamilton has embraced the core consulting values penned by our founding partner, Edwin Booz:

• Start with character, intelligence, and industry
• Daily – think right, act right, eat right, sleep right, work right, and play right
• Know your own blind spots
• Always be willing to listen and to help worthy young people
• Require character, intelligence, and "hard work" as the starting foundation in selecting people
• Pick the cream of the crop for your partners
• Fear not the future, nor people

START WITH CHARACTER AND FEAR NOT THE FUTURE

In 2014, as we celebrate our historic 100th year in business, these characteristics remain constant in our continued delivery of expert strategy, technology, and engineering services. Throughout our centennial year, we're commemorating this rare milestone through shared stories of our legacy, vision for the future, and sponsorships with leading institutions.

Our heritage, culture, and exceptional people are an enduring testament to a 100-year-old institution that is still driven by the same values that were core to its founding. Edwin Booz said it best: Start with character... and fear not the future. Here's to another 100 years.
